Chapter Book Read Alouds for Preschoolers and Kindergarteners

The following is a list of recommended chapter books and novels to read to your preschooler or kindergartener.

Does your child love to sit and listen to picture book after picture book? As your child's attention span increases, you can move to longer books, starting with short chapter books and moving to longer novels. Children usually understand two grade levels above their reading level. By reading more challenging books to your children, you are exposing them to more words, which will help increase their vocabulary, getting them ready to read when they start school.

Don't expect to read the entire book in one sitting. Read a chapter or few pages a night for 10 to 20 minutes.

And remember, even if you are reading chapter books, don't stop reading picture books with your children. There are lots of longer picture books you can also enjoy together.

Mr. Popper's Penguins by Richard and Florence Atwater

Mr. Popper is a house painter who is always dreaming of faraway places. His favorite subject is polar exploration and he reads all the new books and sees all the new movies about the Arctic and the Antarctic. When he receives a penguin from Admiral Drake in the Antarctic, Mr. Popper's life and fortune changes.
